Imagine the scene...

A street artist drawing, painting, scene after scene of people living life...

Normally these pictures are still-life - A depiction of life with no life in them but this time, as you walk round looking at these pictures, they seem to come alive.

Men, women in all walks of life going about their business in each of these pictures on the sidewalk.

And then as you admire these wonderfully realistic pictures, you notice that the street artist is looking intently at you and he comes over when you look up at him. And he takes you by the hand and starts to tell you stories of the people in each of the pictures.

He points them out one by one and mentions each by name...

And as he starts to talk and lead you from picture to picture, you realise that there are innumerable pictures as far as the eye can see and each one of them has a story.

And that story seems to include you in some way.

Something you did, when you did not even realise you were doing anything had impacted every single one of these people in these pictures. And not in a bad way...

You had been doing your best to follow the calling on your life and just by being your best self, you had impacted every single one of these people for good.

You recognised the stories of some of your customers and you smiled to see how your product, service, music, book, ministry had changed their life in some small way and in some cases, in a HUGE way.

And you also heard stories of people you had never even heard of who had somehow been impacted by you or by the people you had impacted.

Some people had never paid you a penny and had never even acknowledged you in any way and yet, because you had kept keeping on, you had changed their life in some way.

And the street artist just keeps talking and talking and telling you story upon story...

And your eyes well up with tears as you realise that all that time when you felt in the depths of despair that nothing you did seemed to be making any difference to anyone, it had actually been worth it.
