Our primary ideology is an adherence to forensic, 1st hand, evidence of primary source material for LDS scriptural research. We are not entirely opposed to alternative theories, we won't entirely exclude them, so long as the research follows the principles of logical argument and direct evidence. We are aligned with the idea that Joseph Smith is primarily responsible for his work, not his scribes; such that they represent a strong probability of revelatory information directly from Joseph Smith. We believe that the ancient languages that came from Joseph Smith, if understood in the right context, can be shown to be correct translations.

Therefore we believe Joseph Smith to be responsible for his own work in these areas, not the theory that puts the responsibility upon scribes for things that they merely recorded. No responsible historian would say that Oliver Cowdery or other scribes are responsible for the content of the Book of Mormon text. No responsible academic ought to put upon scribes the responsibility for Joseph Smith's other works either.
