WHOLESOME CLEAN ROMANCE

SYNOPSIS: Leslie Dixon finds herself on a plane heading for the spacious countryside and rolling mountains of Nashville, Tennessee. Why? Because her boss, Mr. Winston, is back in California lying in the ICU of Destin's Medical Center paralyzed by a sudden heart attack. Fortunately, he'll recover. But until he does, she's on a very long vacation. Home—the thought brings a smile to her face because it means she'll spend quality time with her grandmother, DAISY. But her smile only lasts for a short minute as another image materializes: That of JONAS McCLURE, her only neighbor down the country road, and also her biggest source of anguish.

Failing health and hard times forced her grandfather to sell most of the farmland to his family when she was nothing but pigtails and legs. And although she was able to form an instant connection with part of the McClure family, the most difficult to form anything with was Jonas. From the moment his twelve-year old, eyes locked onto her, she knew the devilment instigating that smile would push her patience beyond the confines of civility.

A deep love for him was forged out of their childhood friendship: He'd chase her with a whopper of a spider; dare her to see who could throw a rock the furthest; or run the fastest down the road. As the years progressed, innocent games were supplanted by strange awakenings during her high-school years when the latest hairstyles replaced her braids and the curves of her body became more pronounced. His boyish teasing matured into lengthy stares when he thought she wasn't aware, and his goading laughter evolved into the sweetest of smiles.

Now he's a full-grown man; and he'll always be her one and only love. After all these years, he still frightens her, moves her in ways no other man ever could, which includes her latest steady—KAL. And yet, this is a love best kept hidden behind their competitive friendship. After all, to him, she's only the neighbor down the road that he likes to flirt and tease with—his sidekick. There will be no harvest moon nights for her. But this long visit home will no doubt test her determination to keep him at arm's length, a task proven more difficult by this newfound closeness between him and her grandmother. And true to form, the moment she arrives, his lion-on-the-prowl game, where he loves circling her and forcing her to take evasive action, begins. Although she vows not to give in to his sultry charm and seductive teasing, Jonas has a willful streak, and true to his nature, vows are meant to be broken.

She's been trying to contact Kal, back in California. Safe, dependable Kal. If he were with her, Jonas would be less of a problem—right? She exhales in despair at having realized the answer to that immediately.

In the middle of struggling with Jonas' constant overwhelming presence, Kal's secretive mood and his strange disappearing acts are cause for concern. Jonas has become involved and sums it all up in one word: Embezzlement. But, Leslie can't believe Kal would ever be involved in such a horrendous act. And yet, he's come out of hiding wrapped in trouble and insists she pack a few clothes and disappear under the secret shadows of the night. She has a big decision to make.

Will she be able to leave Daisy, again? And will Jonas be able to save her in time?
