2008 Survey of Executive and Administrative Assistants John Ehrhardt

Throughout 2008, economic turmoil rocked the employment and financial markets. Over the next several years, the typical compensation policies and practices will not likely see employers through the effects of cascading bankruptcies, spiraling expenses, and eroding margins. The Survey of Executive and Administrative Assistants, now in its seventeenth year of publication, measures pay practices and compensation levels of C-Level support staff at our nation's largest employers. It is the ONLY report of its kind. If you have ever wondered just how valuable the top-level assistants are in corporate America, then please enjoy this compilation.
