Grizzly-Cop Eats Faces Mark Henely

When a vigilante known as the Grizzly-Cop comes to a small town in New Jersey, two human detectives are forced to find a way to shut down his reign of terror.

The Grizzly-Cop is a grizzly bear with the intelligence and training of a human cop. Obsessed with preventing crimes before they happen, the Grizzly-Cop roams the New York tristate area eating the faces of every wannabe criminal he finds. However, when the Grizzly-Cop makes his way to Wall Township, New Jersey, he encounters a couple of human detectives that might just have what it takes to shut him down.

This story functions as a Brechtian meditation on the role of law enforcement in our society. Every police officer in this story plays by his own set of rules. Each set of rules reflects an ideology. Each ideology is put to the test as these characters battle for moral supremacy.

Grizzly-Cop Eats Faces is the first book in a series written by a guy who really likes writing stories about bears doing stuff that they typically don't do in real life.
