This story was originally published in Day One, a weekly literary journal dedicated to short fiction and poetry from emerging writers.

Harold Fitz is losing his mind. His wife has ousted him from their home, citing his newly developed “creepiness” as the reason. The small-town newspaper he runs is on the brink of collapse, and he worries that he will be blamed for the recently deceased editor-in-chief’s embezzlement. Not only that, Fitz fears that his former boss may be haunting him from beyond the grave. Over the course of a single night, Fitz confronts his obsessions—from philosophy to carpet patterns to televised horror movies—hoping to solve the mysteries of his boss’s death and his own life’s unraveling.
