Words are powerful. Our words affect people in different ways. One man's meat is another man's poison; you may liberally use four letter curse words in the company of your friends but wouldn't dare do so in the presence of someone that you respect because you are aware that it's not the best thing to do.

When it comes to analyzing just how important words are then you have to consider that people have different ways of interpreting the words that we speak. When it comes to women, you also need to consider they are more emotional than men. This means that the way they receive a comment may not depend on the straight forward meaning of it. A lot of factors come into consideration when it comes to how words are received by women.

For men who are looking to always keep the peace, it's always a good thing to take note of the trigger words. This involves identifying words that trigger different emotions in women during what time they do so and in what way they can be used to avoid what situation. Trying to get this vocabulary requires a lot of research as one word may not apply for all occasions. Telling a woman she looks healthy and attractive when she is expecting may be misconstrued to mean she is overweight. Commenting on a friend's great looking dress may be misconstrued to mean you fancy her friend. So when it comes to words and women, it's important to tread lightly.

When all else fails, it's good to have the knowledge of the words that you absolutely must avoid because they trigger scary emotions in women as well as the words that you would do well to be familiar with because they get you the best treatment from women. "Top Ten Words Women Hate and Like" shows you how words affect women and discusses in detail about:
