Jane Carroll is a pleasure-seeking, self-centered young woman until her much-loved father, Bart, is murdered. Jane discovers that two "funny little pictures" are missing from Bart's souvenir cabinet. Jane had always thought that they were just cheap souvenirs so the fact that they were suddenly missing was puzzling. When she discovers two letters apparently hidden by Bart the mystery deepens. One letter was from Athens, written in a strange language, and signed "Zajmi," and the other was a receipt for twenty-five thousand dollars from Herod's Alcazar in Las Vegas and signed by someone named Jack Drummond. Jane realizes that her father had many secrets and regrets that she had no idea what he had been up to in the last days of his life. Against the advice of her family lawyer and friends, Jane sets out for Las Vegas to find her father's killer. Pursuing the killer, Jane discovers that her father had a mysterious past that included a spy mission that ended in disaster over Albania. Bart was hidden by the locals and grew to care for the Albanian people. He was part of an effort to save rare Albanian art from the occupying forces. The missing "funny little pictures" are the key to solving the mystery of Bart's death and finding a vicious killer who is likely to kill again.
